On September 15, 2010, the President signed the Presidential Policy Directive (PPD) on Global Development, which underscores that development is vital to national security and is a strategic, economic, and moral imperative for the United States. The PPD on Global Development provides clear guidance to all Federal agencies and sets forth a new development policy, enhanced operational model, and modern architecture for U.S. development efforts. Consistent with that new policy, On February 9, 2012 the President signed an Executive Order establishing the President's Global Development Council. The Council, which will be administered by the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID), will be comprised of no more than 12 individuals from a variety of sectors outside the Federal Government, including, among others, institutions of higher education, non-profit and philanthropic organizations, civil society, and private industry. In addition to these 12 individuals, the Secretaries of State, Treasury, and Defense, the USAID Administrator, the Chief Executive Officer of the Millennium Challenge Corporation (MCC), the US Trade Representative, and the President and CEO of the Overseas Private Investment Corporation (OPIC) will serve on the Council as non-voting members. The Council will inform and provide advice to the President and other senior U.S. officials on U.S. global development policies and practices, support new and existing public-private partnerships, and increase awareness and action in support of development by soliciting public input on current and emerging issues in the field of global development.
